Recent Romance.

Daring the last few days public rumor has been busy with another tragedy, very insignificapt when compared with the assassination or suicide of a Saltan, but not wanting in interest as an illustration of the irregularities of Turkish life. Some two or three years ago a young Circassian slave, endowed with a few of those charms which all Circaesian slaves are popularly supposed to possess, songht refuge in the bouse of a Christian lady in Broussa. Her story of the ill-trestment she had received from her master, Ali Boy, a Torkish official, was fully correborated by the marks of violence on ber face and other parts of her body, and the Christian lady, who belonged to a consular fau. ily, promised to afford her all possible protection. According to law, that protection was which ferbids the introduction of foreign sisves into the Ostoman Empire, there is nothing in the treatics or the Ottoman law which allows a foreigner to interfere between a girl who is legally a slave and her rightful owner. Ali Boy might, therefore, have applied to the Shoriat Tribnosi, and have demanded that his properly should be restored to him; but feeling, perhaps, that with regard to the girl he had overstepped the limits of ressenable disciplinary authority, and foreseeing that legal proceedings in such cir cumstances with a member of a consular tamily might produce a scandal injurious to his acvancement in the service, he refrained from taking any energet c legal steps, and adowed the girl to depart with her protectors for Con-stantinople. Here she lived unmolested as a servant in the house of the Christian lady for sometime, but the authorities had cognizince of the allair, and considered it very unbecoming, hot to day scanda our, that a Museu man we man The family parents but this was not considered and be supported by the family pare assurances that no attempt at conversion would be made, but this was not considered enough, and at last it was agreed that the girl about deither be transferred to the house of a Turkish Pasha or married to a Mussulman of some hind. She did not like either plan. Learning that she could no longer remain in the house where she had been so kindly treated, and fearing that she would be sent back to her former master, she became greatly ex-cited, showed symptoms of mental derangement, and, in spite of being carofully watched, suc-ceeded in committing suicide. - Constantinople Cor. London Times

PRESIDENTS AND GOVERNORS .- Among the umors chronicled of the Yorktown celebration was mentioned that President Arthur was introduced to the Governor of Virginia instead of the latter being presented to the President of the United States. Some have contended that this blunder was an intentional one, and was a reassertion of the dectrine of States' rights. If so, it was morely snother rendering of the old question of etiquotte between President George Washington and Gev. John Haccock, of Massachusetts. When the former made his first visit to Boston after he became President he scoepted an invitation of the Governor to an informal dinner, but expected a call from that functionary as soon he arrived, instead of which he received a message from him pleading that he was too much iouisposed to do so. Washington doubted the sincerity of the apology, as he had been given to understand that the Governor wished to evade making the first call, holding that as Governor of a State, and within the bounds of that State, it was a proper point of etiquette that he should receive the first visit even from the President of the United States. Washington resisted this protension, so excused himself from the dinner and dined at his lodgings, The next day the Governor's friends advised him to waive the point of stiquette, so he sent his best respects to the President, informing him that it at home and at leisure he would do himself the honor to visit him in halt an hour, intimating that he would have done it sooner had his health permitted, and that it was not without bezard to his health that he did it now, Irving, who tells the story in his Life of Washington, points to the frong implied in the last sentence of Washington's polite note of reply, wheiein, after expressing the pleasure it would give him to see the Governor, and mentioning that he would be at home until two o'clock, "he most carnestly bogs that the Goverpor will not he zard his health on the occasion." But the Governor, according to an authority, endeavored to give color to his pretended itdisposition by going to make the liggated call enveloped in red biaize and being carried into the house ty servants. Nevertheless his health was not injured by the exertion, and from that time no points of etiquette interfered with the Governor's intercourse with the President during the stay of the latter in Boston.

A New Mother Shipton.

When is wyers fail to make a fee, And juries never disagree; When politicians are content And landlords don't collect their rent; When parties smash all the machines, And Boston folks give up their beaus; When naughty children all die young, And girls are born without a tongue; When ladies don't take time to hop, And office-holders never flop; When preachers cut their sermons short, And all folks to the church resort; When back subscribers all have paid, And editors have fortunes made; Such happening will sure portend This world must soon come to an end.
